2. For each project there should be an indication of: the project number; the subject covered (unless it is adequately reflected in the title); the date initiated; the date completed or the proposed date of completion; the magnitude of the study; the name of the unit responsible for producing the project, and the security classification. To insure uniformity in reporting, it would be appreciated if the attached sample report form could be followed as closely as possible.

3. It is unnecessary to report publications designed merely to inform a particular audience of facts or conclusions derived from other research papers. On the other hand, anything which in the view of the producer makes a new contribution to our understanding of the Soviet economy should be reported even though no new facts are revealed.

4. If your office engages in continuing research activities on the Soviet Orbit economy whose scope and nature is not adequately reflected in your project list, an explanation of such activities should be attached to your report.

5. Your representative on the Economic Intelligence Committee, Commander Donald C. Deane, attended the 16 August meeting of that Committee in which this survey was discussed at some length. If you have further questions on the preparation of the report it is suggested that your representatives raise these questions with the Secretary of the Economic Intelligence Committee, [REDACTED]. In order to minimize the burden on your staff of preparing these reports, which can be as informal as is consistent with giving us the minimum information necessary, a member of the Secretariat will be available to visit your office and provide additional help and guidance. 25X1A9a

6. Your report should be submitted to the Secretariat of the Economic Intelligence Committee within two weeks from the date of this letter.
